Abstract

This workshop, a follow-up to the paper: Enhancing self-access learning in an on-line editing programme, is designed to give participants hands-on experience in using the 76-item Comment Bank to give feedback on students' written work. Instead of creating proprietary software to support essay marking, a blog feature on a learning management system is the medium to enable such interactive writing exercise. Participants can explore the freedom to design teaching and learning activities online with Web 2.0 technologies. The on-line resources linked to the Bank and the explanation notes will be discussed; the challenges and potential in further development of the Comment Bank will be explored.
